

The Church and Disability: Inclusion and Participation By Professor Louise Kretzschmar

If you are looking for inspiration to develop a ministry that includes people with disabilities, look no further.

Dr Paul Leshota, senior lecturer in Biblical Science and Pastoral Therapy in the Department of Theology and Religious Studies at the National University of Lesotho, says:

"The Church and Disability" is biblically grounded, doctrinally sensitive to diversity and practically responsive to the challenges of the church that seeks to give meaning and hope to those who have been crushed by life. This lucid and easy-to-read book provides a much-needed inspiration to lecturers in Bible colleges and seminaries as well as pastors in churches to easily prepare for and work towards a disability friendly church. It is a must read for both pastors and the laity who are working in the area of inclusion of people with disability in church.
